

Peter and the Wolf | York Minster

- DATE 13 Feb 24
- TIME 7:00 pm
- LOCATION York Minster
- PRICE £6 - £22

Join brave young Peter as he overcomes his fear of a big bad wolf in Sergei Prokofiev's classic Peter and the Wolf played on York Minster's recently-refurbished Grand Organ.

Hear captivating instrumental characterisations of Peter's animal friends as a live feed of the cathedral's marvellous organ being played by Ben Morris, Assistant Director of Music at York Minster, is shown on screens to the audience. Using special stops on the organ, Ben will guide young listeners through the sounds of this magnificent instrument. The performance will be narrated by Stuart Perry, the Silly History Boys' silliest boy.

Prokofiev's familiar and accessible composition is the perfect introduction to classical music. During the performance, children are encouraged to sit on cushions and rugs at the front of the Nave to get the best possible view of the organ.

The performance will take place on Tuesday 13 February and will last approximately one hour. Children are encouraged to bring a toy with them and are welcome to come dressed in their pyjamas ready for bed, but remember to wrap up warm! A buggy park will be available.

Tickets for the family concert are now on sale from the website (<https://yorkminster.org/whats-on/event/peter-and-the-wolf/>) or by calling our Bookings Team on 01904 557200. Tickets cost £8 for an adult and £6 for a child. A family ticket of £22 for two adults and two children is also available. Children over the age of two need their own seat.

The performance is recommended for ages 5 to 95!
